

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. once said, "Everybody can be great... because anybody can serve. You don't have to have a college degree to serve. You don't have to make your subject and verb agree to serve. You only need a heart full of grace. A soul generated by love." To serve others often means making sacrifices. Those sacrifices can be as minor as giving up some time to help others or as profound as sacrificing one's life for his or her country.

Do teenagers today have a willingness to serve others? Why or why not? Write a paragraph discussing your opinion and provide support from your own experiences, the experiences of your peers, television, newspaper articles, or any other relevant source. Be sure to clearly state your opinion and use strong examples to support your ideas.
